POWER AND PEOPLE

by Scott Handy President/CEO

The seeds for this editorial began to germinate on Veterans Day. Our offices at Cass County Electric were closed in observance of the day, probably a nod to the fact that at one time a significant number of employees were veterans of World War II. I was out on a training run a few miles south of Fargo that day when I came upon a group of four people marching along the road, one of whom was proudly carrying an American flag. They were several miles from town, and had evidently been on their march for some time. As it turns out, the flag bearer was an 86 year old veteran. Scenes such as this are always moving, and I got choked up as I stopped running to allow the flag to pass by. I was reminded of the freedoms we enjoy in this country and the sacrifices made by many so we can continue to enjoy them. The men and women of our armed forces are always ready to serve, anywhere, any time, and usually in conditions that are extreme and dangerous.

On the other side of the road from the flag marchers was one of Cass County Electric's overhead power lines. As I resumed my run I thought about our own 'troops' at the cooperative and began to draw some parallels between their service and those provided by our armed forces. To be sure, there's some overlap – several employees are also veterans of military service and it's an honor to count them among my colleagues.

Soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen are highly trained and dedicated. So are CCEC employees. Members of the military are on call 100% of the time. I knew as I ran along that power line (of which we have nearly 5,000 miles) that if any problems developed, we would have an immediate response – even on a holiday. Members of the military endure dangerous conditions, often in weather extremes. While linemen may not face enemies armed with deadly weapons, they do face the worst nature can throw at them and they handle deadly high voltage wire and equipment in gloved hands. Military personnel in combat are backed up by highly trained logistical teams who coordinate targets, supplies and strategies. Crews working on power restoration and power line construction are backed up by teams of power control technicians, engineers, design and maintenance supervisors and a cadre of people who handle all sorts of back office functions.

This issue of Highline Notes includes photos of the people who design, build, operate and maintain our utility plant and business operations. We run these photos each year in the December issue to remind members that behind poles, wires, green boxes, trucks, buildings, monthly bills, publications and meters stand the ultimate power resource – people. At present 94 full-time and several part-time people handle all the tasks mentioned previously, governed by a democratically-elected board of nine directors.

Despite all the state-of-the-art equipment and technology employed, the level of service we provide always comes down to the skill and dedication of the people here, and the daily decisions they make in carrying out their jobs. When duty calls, they answer – in addition to doing all the normal, unseen things that need doing every day. I am proud to serve among them.

Please accept our best wishes for a blessed Christmas season and a happy New Year.

FirstLink

A big part of what FirstLink offers the community is suicide prevention and volunteer connections. These are important and often the first things that come to mind when people think of the organization, but the call-center offers many resources.

FirstLink started in 1967 as a volunteer organization and its HotLine was added in 1971. Over the years, they have evolved to an efficient, seamless hub where one can find support with anything from volunteer opportunities and recreation to rent assistance, support groups, addictions, or suicide – to name a few. “Every call is different. Many times we help them with additional resources,” said Stacie Loegering, director of information and crisis services.

Holiday Help

Since 1974, FirstLink has coordinated the collection and distribution of holiday gifts for disadvantaged children and special needs adults in Cass and Clay counties. Last year, FirstLink distributed gifts and food to 4,300 children and special needs adults in 1,300 families through its Giving Tree of Hope program. The program anonymously matches volunteers with children and special needs adults. Volunteers are given the age of the child or adult and in turn they purchase a gift which is given to the individual in December. FirstLink credits its volunteers with the great success of the program. “The Holiday Giving Tree makes a big difference in the lives of a lot of families,” explained Cindy Miller, FirstLink’s executive director. “We’ve had people that have given for years and then suddenly, they were on the other side, and needed assistance.”

2-1-1

Although HotLine has been a part of FirstLink for 40 years, it has now changed to the FirstLink 2-1-1 Helpline. The 2-1-1 number is a national assistance number. In 2007, FirstLink began providing the 2-1-1 service for calls that originate in Cass County, N.D. and Clay County, Minn. In 2010, the organization became the 2-1-1 designation for the entire state of North Dakota. 2-1-1 is an easy-to-remember, 24 hour helpline that offers listening and support, human service information and referral and volunteer opportunities. It is not an emergency line. Anyone can call at anytime, even if it is to ask a quick question or they just need a listening ear.

Success Stories***

Often times, a phone call goes something like this: It is 3 a.m., the phone rings and the caller on the line says “I am having a hard time.”

It is the goal of FirstLink to have the end of the call sound something like this (and it often does): “Thank you for your support! It helps to talk with you and to tell you what I’ve experienced. I want to thank you, thank you, thank you so much. I feel good knowing there are people out there to talk to. Thank you.”

Calls may be like this: “A caller had a rough week and was struggling with some health issues, past abuse issues and was feeling pretty depressed. He said he was so glad that we were here to listen. He said he really appreciated it and kept thanking me. He said he was pleased and grateful for the listening and support that he was provided. He also said that it was nice to be able to vent and have a safe, confidential place to turn to and a neutral party to talk to.”

Some calls are for information: A grandmother moved to North Dakota to be near her daughter and grandchildren. She called to learn what activities and resources were available for her grandchildren. FirstLink gave her resources for community programs, how to volunteer, etc.

*While these stories are true, they have been made generic and are possibly combined stories to protect the anonymity that is so important to FirstLink.
